MEMORANDUM FOR: Deputy Director for Intelligence

FROM: Director of Central Intelligence

SUBJECT: Your Remarks to National Strategic Materials and Minerals Program Advisory Committee

I like your remarks to the National Strategic Materials and Minerals Program Advisory Committee. I think the portion on the risk of becoming vulnerable is particularly valuable and should be looked at in greater depth in a broad document and also in the document about opportunities abroad for US know-how and technology to be applied to demonstrate our ability to deliver economic benefits in contrast to the Soviets' ability to deliver only know-how and military equipment, as well as to improve our own markets to help Third World countries to service their heavy debt. I understand from Herb that this latter subject has been intended as a future estimate and I would like to see how that is being formulated again sometime early in June.
